Bland Is Coming

Chairman of House Fisheries Committee To Study Maine Conditions

Accepting an invitation to study Maine's fishery problems first hand, Representative Schuyler Otis Bland, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, will arrive in Portland for a three-day visit Monday. Bland's personal study came as a result of an invitation issued by the Maine Congressional delegation and himself, Commissioner Greenleaf stated.

A tentative schedule calls for a series of meetings and interviews in Portland, Monday and Tuesday morning, for which Representative James C. Oliver is making arrangements. Tuesday afternoon and evening will be passed at Boothbay Harbor with Representative Clyde H. Smith present. Wednesday, Bland, accompanied by Greenleaf and Representative Ralph O. Brewster, will visit Jonesport and other Washington County towns.

Greenleaf said that Bland had expressed "great sympathy with the Maine situation," and predicted that the visit would help much to get favorable congressional action on a variety of "pressing problems."

CALIFORNIA'S NEW FRUIT

California has a recent development into the fruit industry centering in San Diego county. This is called Passion fruit, not yet widely known, an exotic production and much favored by those who have partaken of it. More than 100,000 pounds of this luxury fruit was marketed this year and growers are planning to introduce it into Eastern markets.

C. C. C. At Its Best

Public Has Been Quick To Take Advantage of New Facilities

Records in the office of Robert Fechner, Director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the War Department, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Labor, and the Veterans Administration, which co-operate in the conduct of the C.C.C. program, indicate that today the corps is doing better work in the field and forest and achieving more worthwhile results in its youth improvement program than at any time since the corps was founded. It is not too much to say that in the C.C.C. the Nation has not only a trained conservation unit, but also a sound practical national institution for conserving youth.

By end of the current fiscal year, the C.C.C. camps will have been in operation on a national scale for a little more than five years. Beginning on April 5, 1933, with an authorized strength of 300,000 men and 1500 camps, the corps was gradually expanded until in September of 1935 there were 2652 camps in operation throughout the country and a total of 520,000 men, including 10,000 Indians and 4000 territorialists, enrolled and at work. After the peak enrollment was reached in 1935, the corps was gradually reduced until June 28, 1937, when new C.C.C. legislation was enacted extending the life of the corps for three years beginning July 1, 1937, and limiting the maximum enrolled strength to 300,000, plus 10,000 Indians and 5000 territorialists.

Almost every cent of the $320,000,000 which it is estimated will be obligated for C.C.C. operations during the current fiscal year has or will find its way quickly into trade channels—thus aiding business and industry. A large share of C.C.C. expenditures are obligated for food, shoes, clothing, medical supplies, trucks, tractors, lumber hardware, and the thousands of other articles and pieces of work machinery needed in advancing nationwide conservation program and in running a housekeeping establishment of such a tremendous size as that represented by the C.C.C.

Virtually all of the young men enrolled and many of the war veterans allocate home about five-sixths of their month cash allowances to needy dependents. This means that out of the $30 a month base cash allowance paid each enrollee by the office of the Chief of Finance of the War Department, the C.C.C. fiscal office, close to $25 goes to aid dependents at home, leaving $5 for each youth to spend at camp. Young men without dependents deposit a minimum of $22 a month each with the office of the Chief of Finance and this money is turned over to them when they are discharged from the camps. It is estimated that the total amount which enrollees have or will send to dependents this year will aggregate $72,000,000.

As a work agency the C.C.C. continued the fine work which it has been doing in past years. Enrollees worked on national, State, and private forest lands, on national and State parks, on agricultural lands where erosion-control work was necessary, on drainage and reclamation projects, on wildlife refuges, on grazing lands on the public domain, and on Indian reservations. More than 150 major types of work were carried on.

For Safe Motoring

Etna Company Furnishes Some Hints Worthy Of Attention

The Safety Education Department of the Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., offers a list of "hints" for safe motoring. Following are the major points to keep in mind:

"Remember" to drive at reasonable speeds giving due regard to weather, road conditions and thickly settled areas.

"Remember" to use proper hand signals before stopping or making turns.

"Remember" to give pedestrians a chance to cross at intersections.

"Remember" to keep a safe distance between you and the car ahead.

"Remember" drinking should not mix with driving.

"Remember" to slow down and look both ways at railroad crossings and intersections.

"Remember" to keep your attention fixed on your driving and not on the scenery.

All of these "hints" also apply at night with the addition of the following:

"Remember" if head-lights bother you, get an early start and avoid night driving.

"Remember" darkness intensifies all of the day-time hazards—slow down at night!

"Remember! Be Careful!"

A MILLION SHORT

The Sardine Situation Has Now Reached The Desperate Stage

Down East, in Lubec, this is what they had to say yesterday about the sardine situation:

"Hopes for something approaching a normal sardine pack in September, faded this week, when the 'dark' of the month passed with hardly a full cargo of fish at any factory, some taking as low as four or five hogheads for a day's work."

"The situation is now approaching the desperate stage as regards the 1938 pack, already a million cases short of normal."

"If the island weirs fish heavily, the local packers say, competition will be too heavy to allow of refilling after the present stock is boxed and shipped. If, however, the run is small, the Lubec packers can keep along on the edge of the market without being caught too heavily stocked with hanging herring."

EXPLOITING THE BEAVER

National Park Service To Introduce It Into Several Sections, Including Acadia Park

The National Park Service is considering reintroducing the beaver into three chief eastern parks—Shenandoah in Virginia's Blue Ridge, the Great Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, and Acadia National Park in Maine.

Research on the beaver has taken wildlife technicians back to the writings of Capt. John Smith. They found that their pelts for making beaver hats was an important lure that led trappers and explorers into the wilderness back from the seacoast.

There has been a beaver colony at The Bog, in Rockland, for several years.

Rockland High School's football warriors for 1938 meet Brunswick High at 2.30 this afternoon in the first game of the season, staged at Community Park.

Coach Matheson has high hopes for a smashing victory to start the season as his squad is in excellent shape following two weeks of hard work. The Brunswick team is altogether an unknown quantity, but local boys show good promise and will gain much from this afternoon's contest. It is hoped by the school authorities that a good representation of citizens will be on hand to cheer the boys along.

This is the tentative lineup: Le, Chisholm, Ellis; It, Perry; Ig, McConchie, Wooster; c, Johnson, Cummings; rg, Mazzeo; rt, Horeysek; re, Huntley, Ellis; qb, Allen; rhb, Jordan, Duff; lhb, Billings; fb, Glover.

His Plane Crashed

Lieut. Robert P. Lesser of Lincolnville Killed In New Mexico

Second Lieutenant Robert P. Lesser, of Lincolnville, a student officer in the Army Air Corps at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex., was killed Thursday, when his plane crashed as he was attempting to land at Roswell, New Mexico.

Lesser, a West Point Military Academy graduate in 1937, was one of a group of student fliers making a final flight before next month's graduation.

Lieut. B. J. Webster, the flight commander, said he did not know the cause of the accident.

Lieut. Lesser was a native of Newark, N. J.

A New Librarian

Eleanor Wetherbee of Malden Unanimously Chosen For Rockland Post

The trustees of the Rockland Public Library met Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Aldana Spear and elected Miss Eleanor H. Wetherbee of Malden, Mass., as librarian to succeed Mrs. George J. Adams, formerly C. Winifred Coughlin. The choice was unanimous.

The new executive is a graduate of Malden High School 1932, and Bates College, 1937. She also attended the Library school of Simmons College and received the B. S. degree last June.

Her experience has been with the public libraries in Malden and Worcester and she comes to her Rockland assignment with most excellent references.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK

My grandfather's clock was too large for the shelf.
So it stood ninety years on the floor;
It was taller by half than the old man himself.
Though it weighed not a pennyweight more.
It was bought on the morn of the day he was born,
And was always his treasure and pride.
But it stopped short—never to go again—
When the old man died.
Chorus:
Ninety years, without slumbering—
tick, tick, tick, tick,
His life—seconds numbering—tick, tick, tick, tick,
It stopped short—never to go again—
When the old man died.
In watching its pendulum swinging to and fro,
Many hours had he spent while a boy;
And in childhood and manhood the clock seemed to know
And to share both his grief and his joy.
For it struck twenty-four when he entered the door,
With a blooming and beautiful bride;
But it stopped short—never to go again—
When the old man died.
It rang an alarm in the dead of the night—
An alarm that for years had been dumb—
And we knew that his spirit was plumbing for flight—
That his hour of departure had come.
Still the clock kept time, with a soft muffled chime.
As we silently stood by his side:
But it stopped short—never to go again—
When the old man died.

"The Black Cat"

By The Roving Reporter

Millinocket now has a commodious new theatre. And it is either Millinocket or East Millinocket, which has one of the finest High School buildings in the State.

I am indebted to Mrs. H. A. Bain and Miss Addie Snow for a copy of "The Tiny Tattler," a newspaper which does not belie its name, and which they came across in the course of a recent tour of Nova Scotia. It is published in Central Grove, N. S., by youthful editors who declare that their policy is "Without Fear or Favor." The pages measure only three by six inches, but in other respects it emulates the average weekly newspaper. And evidently the residents of Central Grove appreciate the juvenile enterprise for The Tiny Tattler is in its seventh year.

I doubt if there is another region

in Knox County where they are as fond of flower gardens as they are at Spruce Head in the vicinity of Rockledge Inn. I have especially in mind that delightful spot on the premises of the cottage known as "The Barnacle" and owned by Phil Ware. In the hollow of the granite ledges is a lagoon possibly 20 feet in diameter, where pond lilies are grown. On the banks thrive some of the most attractive of the season's flowers, making a picture which would have excited the envy of the landscape gardener in the Garden of Eden. Still in its glory "The Barnacle" lagoon is the show-place of Spruce Head Island.

And What a View!

Correspondent Gasps When Looking Down From Caterpillar Hill

It was a perfect day, the kind that lures one to drive miles and miles when nature hints of cooler weather and trees begin to don their gay apparel. Overhead was a cloudless sky and not a breath of wind stirred the limpid water which was visible a good part of the way to Castine.

This picturesque port, once the capital of Acadia, was hotly contested for in the past by English, French and Dutch colonists and various spots are marked where blood was shed by the different nations. Up and down the streets of this little sea coast town where so much history was written during Revolutionary days, we paused to read the inscriptions on the numerous markers which testified of Yankee victories and defeats. Many of them related gruesome facts such as the British victors severing the Yankee's ears and noses and forcing them to eat them, then burning them at the stake.

We followed the Bagaduce River to Brooksville and on to Sargentville where the trail climbed most of the way, with occasional turn-out where one could view the scenery.

From the summit of so-called Caterpillar hill one fairly gasps at the stupendous grandeur unfolding in every direction. Far off on the Western horizon could be seen Owl's Head and beyond, with the aid of field glasses, familiar streamers of white floating from the twin stacks of the Cement Plant at Thomaston. The majestic Camden Hills formed a most impressive background and farther to the North was seen Mt. Waldo. Islesboro, Vinal Haven, North Haven, Isle au Haut and many of the smaller islands filled their respective niches in the Great Atlantic. In the immediate foreground was seen the long-sought Sedgwick-Deer Isle bridge under construction. On the East rose the stately peaks of Cadillac Mt. and its companion hills.

A warm September sun bathed glassy waters with a silver radiance that added much beauty to the far-flung panorama before us. One could not be far from wrong to claim that it is one of the most spectacular viewpoints on the coastline. Looking down on this great section of the map one is convinced that the rugged coastline of Maine is, indeed, equal in distance to that in a straight line from Maine to Florida.

And what a view! K.

Law Is Not Off

A Hunter Who Read The Courier-Gazette's Story Is Thus Informed

Edgecomb, Sept. 15. Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—In your paper of Sept. 13 you allowed an item to appear that may cause much trouble to others and nearly ended in a fine for the writer.

You stated the law on ducks was off Sept. 15. I started out after the birds when a State Warden overtook me and said the law was not "Off" till Oct. 1.

Who is right? Please print answer in your paper and set at ease many of us hunters in this section. Thanks!

E. S. MacMahon

The article which appeared in The Courier-Gazette was a despatch Press, which is one of the most reliable news gathering organizations in the world, and we had no hesitancy in using it. The wardens are probably right, but it would cost interested hunters only a three-cent stamp to write to Commissioner George J. Stobie at Augusta.

BUILDING STRONG BRIDGES

Youth the time for close attention To the structure of our lives. Brave, staunch hearts and lungs demanded.

If a valiant course we bide In the battles of sufficiency in our drives.

Courageous hearts bridge many a conflict. In this struggle for just cause. Close attention to life's purpose. Inflexible to our God and His laws.

Building bridges for the future—Use of conquering tread of feet. In the great march of stewardship the duty we must meet.

With eyes turned seaward. Hearts well read in deeds of valor. Wrought by those of strength ahead.

Life is replete with connecting bridges Over which we, stumbling, pass. Trying hard to catch the vision of Welded thought, and span.

The heaven-promised goal with honor In immortal habitation, at long last.

THAT LITTLE DOG OF MINE

He wags his stumpy little tail Then dances on his toes. He capers 'round me, oh so gay! And sniffs his funny nose.

He greets me when I've been away With happy bark and whine. I would not change him for a world That little dog of mine.

He never, never thinks I'm wrong And never turns me down. A wee dog with a stumpy tail That chases me around.

I'd have to be most awfully good A great deal of the time. To live up to his love for me That little dog of mine.

And though I should be rich or poor Or shabby as could be. I'm sure I'll find him always there Just tagging after me.

If I should travel far and wide To search, I'll never find. A better or more faithful friend Than that little dog of mine.

MAINE AND VERMONT

Of how much alike they are, Maine and Vermont—

The state of my birth and the state of my home.

Their glory to all I'll everywhere vaunt. No matter how far from their realms I may roam.

Oh! Proud may we be of each dear Yankee state—

They're greatest of all in the country we love.

In political character equally great. Esteeming our honor the New Deal above.

And in their geography also they're great. Vermont's surface area the coast line of Maine—

The biggest in all our land, let me state. But they're all wrangled up, I'll explain.

SEPTEMBER

Now the stars come trooping Through the skies at night. Piling all the darkened places Of the earth with light.

And the silvery moon is shining Over all so bright! It is September.

Now Jack Frost will use his paint brush. As he loves to do—

Dolling up the trees and bushes In shades of radiant hue: Crimson, yellow, brown and gold.

And we will think and say Such beauty we never did behold Or remember.

COMPLETELY

Am I trusting God completely for today?

Chasing the doubts and clouds of fear away?

Walking closely by His side. Happy whatever betide.

Am I trusting God completely for today?

Am I loving God completely for today? Trusting in His love and mercy all the way?

Praising Him with all my might. Proving Him my chief delight.

Am I loving God completely for today?

AU REVOIR SUMMER

The long, bright days of summer. As quickly they depart.

Leave a treasured memory Stored within the heart.

An aftermath of glory Still sheds a golden light. Ere early shadows deepen Into darkness of the night.

Gay, brilliant days of autumn Greet us with goodly cheer: And invite us to a banquet Of the fruitage of the year.

Goodbye to lovely summer: Hail to the glorious fall! Each season in its passing Brings rich blessing to us all.

INDIAN SUMMER

A lady has come to visit us. All dressed in red and gold; With a coronet of goldenrod Beautiful to behold.

Her apron is filled with luscious fruit And produce of gold and green. Touched ever so lightly by haunting frost— Tempting enough for a queen.

Last night she peeked in my chamber By the light of the harvest moon; As I listened to tinkling cowbells And the drowsy insects' tune.

What Will He Do?

Roosevelt's Reaction To "Purge" Setbacks Eagerly Awaited By Country

Kirke L. Simpson, staff writer for the Associated Press, thus reviews the national political situation:

The overwhelming defeat of Roosevelt-favored candidates in the Democratic senatorial primaries of Georgia, Maryland and South Carolina raised this question today in the minds of many politicians:

Have these setbacks tended to crystallize in the President's mind a decision as to whether he should seek a third term nomination himself in 1940 to "keep the party liberal?"

Speculation over that possibility was even more widespread than talk of the probable effect of the recent balloting on New York's congressional primaries next week. The issue of "conservatism" was raised by Mr. Roosevelt against Representative John O'Connor, in New York city's 16th congressional district, just as it was against the successful senatorial candidates in Georgia, Maryland and South Carolina. O'Connor has countered by running for both Democratic and Republican nominations.

O'Connor is the single figure remaining on the list of those Senate or House Democrats personally tagged by the President for elimination. His renomination by the 16th district Democrats next Tuesday would round out a record of Roosevelt defeat on all party primary fronts where the "liberal" vs. "conservative" issue has been raised.

Since the tide of party decision began turning decisively against his strategy in South Carolina, there has been no authorized word of reaction from Mr. Roosevelt except a statement that he had expected and predicted Senator Smith's renomination in that State, despite his intervention against the senator. Before the Maryland and Georgia voting this week, Roosevelt aides were indicating, off the record, that the White House expected defeats in those States. The results in both were so one-sided that even the most ardent Roosevelt enthusiast must have known in advance that the chances of a New Deal victory were slim.

That is the factor which has raised so strongly in the minds of politicians the question whether the President may not have undertaken the purge for the purpose of testing out his ability to steer his party toward a "liberal" course and presidential candidacy in 1940, without seeking a third nomination himself. Even if he has satisfied himself that only by a third-term campaign can he hope to rally "liberal" sentiment in the party and the nation effectively, there is little chance that Mr. Roosevelt will give any hint of that in whatever comment he may make on the Georgia and Maryland party verdicts.

Acres of Machinery in Motion

A World Clearing House for Machinery.

THE largest and most varied group of machinery in the world is assembled beneath these acres of roofs. Thirty-two of the leading producing countries have sent their latest inventions in friendly rivalry. Whether one is in search of a razor blade or a locomotive, it will be found here in its latest development. The largest machine shop in the world is a feature of the Leipzig Trade Fair. The crowds inspecting the machines are attracted from seventy-four countries, including business men from all parts of the United States. The exhibits included this year many new forms of American machinery.

Some of the most ponderous machines start or stop at a word of command controlled by delicate microphones. Others are operated from keyboards of push buttons by a touch of the finger. In assembling the machinery, railroad tracks are run directly into the vast halls and powerful derricks move thousands of tons of machinery into position. At the last Fair $217,000,000 worth of goods were sold, a large part of which was for export. The Spring session of the Leipzig Fair to be held March 5th-14th will comprise over 3,000 exhibits of tools and machinery. The great display serves as a clearing house for tools and machinery which will later influence the industries of the world.

President, Mrs. Mabelle F. Rose; vice president, Mrs. Nannie K. Allen; secretary, Miss Harriet B. Long; treasurer, Miss Fannie B. Long; auditor, Elmer E. Allen; directors, Charles B. Rose, Mrs. Eleanor L. Aldrich, Mrs. Etta Holbrook; Miss Fannie B. Long, Miss Harriet B. Long, Charles E. Wheeler and J. W. Gillis; librarian, Mrs. Flora Miller; book committee, Mrs. Claribel L. Andrews, Mrs. Flora Miller and Charles B. Rose.

The one thing of sadness in the meeting was the announcement by the president, of the death of a beloved director, R. J. MacKenzie of Bridgeport, Conn and Tenant's Harbor, Mrs. Eleanor L. Aldrich, Mrs. Nannie K. Allen and J. W. Gillis were appointed a committee on resolutions in memory of Mr. MacKenzie.

The sentiment of everyone present was that the past year had been pleasant and prosperous and that the Association might look forward with great courage and optimism to the coming year.

With The Grangers

New Jersey very wisely spends a considerable appropriation each year for publicity in daily and trade papers for the agricultural products of the state. This has brought very definite results, and more and more consumers are buying advertised products; while through such publicity numberless calls have been made for the booklets and other literature which the state department provides. Among the products featured are milk, eggs, vegetables, apples, peaches and potatoes, and others will soon be added to the list. It was largely through Grange agitation, led by State Master David H. Agans, that this program of advertising agricultural products by the state was launched some years ago.

Nearly 2000 people and their friends recently turned out for a Grange Sunday afternoon vespers service in Vermont, with National Master Taber as the speaker.

Maine has perhaps the oldest Grange master in the United States, Henry Wilson Merrill of Hiram, who recently passed his 80th birthday and still going strong. Few, if any, of the 800,000 Grange members in the nation have attained such distinction as a Patron in North Carolina, Mrs. Earle B. Garrett of the State College Grange, who recently secured within a short period 43 applications for membership in her subordinate. This was a part of the North Carolina membership drive, and Mrs. Garrett easily topped the list. Possibly also, she established a national fraternal record for the year, as it is doubtful whether any one member of any fraternity has personally added that number of new initiates during the past eight months.

The Grange fire insurance company in North Carolina has more than $1,000,000 of coverage in force. Two very successful summer camps have been conducted this year by the Ohio State Grange.

Connecticut Patrons are very happy that Frank H. Peet, who retired from the position of State Master last January after four years of service, has been awarded "honorary recognition" for outstanding achievement in agricultural and rural life, through the Connecticut State College at Storrs. Mr. Peet lives at Kent, is a successful dairy farmer and his high standing in the agricultural field has attracted much attention. Two former Connecticut State Masters have attained a similar honor in years past—J. Arthur Sherwood of Easton and the late Burton C. Patterson of Torrington.

The Grange in Missouri recently sponsored a "bird contest," comprising essays and other features, which enlisted the interest of a great number of children.

Several new Granges have lately been chartered in Wyoming and the establishment of a State Grange organization is one of the anticipated events in that state.

"Pat" French Faced Brunswick Judge — Pleaded Not Guilty

Morning papers carried under Brunswick dateline a story of Francis A. (Pat) French, for several years active in the Maine Coast League baseball circuit and for some time connected with the local team.

Francis A. (Pat) French, former football coach at Deering and Lewiston High Schools appeared Friday in Brunswick Municipal Court and pleaded not guilty to an assault and battery charge.

The hearing was continued for two weeks at the request of William B. Edwards, deputy sheriff, who represented the State.

French was charged with assault and battery on Miss Ruth Tanner, of Brunswick, Monday night but the warrant was not sworn out until Thursday when Deputy Sheriff Edwards completed his investigation. Miss Tanner had, until then, refused to reveal her alleged assailant and the circumstances surrounding it, Edwards disclosed.

Miss Tanner, at present is in a Brunswick hospital. Attendants there said her jaw had been broken in two places and she also had suffered a severe eye injury.

French was represented in Court by Eugene Martin of Portland.

SERMONETTE

The Jew, Then and Now

It is well in these dark days, when throughout Europe, it is in order to persecute, expatriate, imprison, rob and murder the Jew, to recall Lord Macaulay's words in the House of Commons over 100 years ago. "The Hon. Member of Oldham tells us the Jews are naturally a mean race; that they are averse to all honorable callings; that they neither sow nor reap; that they have neither flocks nor herds; that usury is the only pursuit for which they are fit; that they are destitute of all elevated and amiable sentiments. Such, sir, has in every age, been the reasoning of bigots. They never fail to plead in justification of persecution the vices which persecution has engendered."

"We treat them as slaves and wonder that they do not regard us as brethren. We drive them to mean occupations, and then reproach them for not embracing honorable professions. We forbid them to possess land; and we complain that they occupy themselves in trade. We abuse them with our superiority of force and then we are disgusted that they have recourse to that cunning which is the natural and universal defense of the weak against the violence of the strong."

"But were they always thus? The member knows, nobody better, that there is nothing in their national character which unites them for the highest duties of citizens. He knows, in the infancy of civilization, that when our island was savage as New Guinea, when letters and arts were unknown to Athens, when scarcely a thatched cottage stood on the site of Rome, these people had their cities, palaces, temples, ships, schools of sacred learning, great statesmen, soldiers, philosophers, historians and poets."

At the Rotary meeting Friday Rev. E. O. Kenyon was a guest and gave a pressing invitation to all to attend the Red Cross convention soon to be held in this city at the Community Building. Donald A. Matheson, the High School football coach, in a very pleasing and optimistic talk regarding the team, urged good attendance at the games not only to finance the organization but to keep the boys enthused. There were 49 present at the meeting of whom E. H. Lloyd of Taunton, Mass., and E. L. True of Camden were members from out of the city.

Through the kindness of Manager Dandaneau of Park Theatre the Sons of the American Legion of Winslow-Holbrook Post have been invited to be his guests at the showing of the picture, "The Sons of the Legion" at Park Theatre Monday night. All Sons of the Legion will meet at Legion Hall at 6 p. m. and will attend in a group. Wear Sons of the Legion cap if possible. Commander Austin Brewer also requests that all members of the Post and Auxiliary who can do so attend this picture and see how the Sons of the Legion are growing and extending their activities.

Rockland High School is planning to introduce six man football into its athletic program this fall. This new game will afford an opportunity for many more boys to learn elementary football. This new sport has gained great favor in the west where regular schedules are being played. Several schools in the vicinity of Rockland are planning to have six man teams. Boothbay Harbor High and Castine Normal School are two that are already set to start the fall schedule. This new venture is one more reason for your purchase of a football season ticket. Your support will make it possible for the school to keep two or three dozen more boys engaged in a wholesome outdoor activity.

Chester O. Wyllie, who has been tenor of the Universalist Church Quartet since Easter Sunday, 1920, has tendered his resignation to become effective at once, and his final appearance with the quartet will be at the Sunday morning service. This announcement will be met with deep regret, as his going from the choir which he has served so well seems an irreparable loss. During his long period of service, there has been a very splendid spirit of co-operation and understanding between Mr. Wyllie, his fellow singers, the music committee, and the church people in general. He has given not only the beauties of his voice and art, but of his fine character—beauties that are bound to leave a lasting impression on all who have had contact with him in these years. By request Mr. Wyllie will sing a farewell solo Sunday, and needless to say a large congregation will be present to hear his beautiful voice and express the regret certain to prevail that it is his final appearance.

At the Universalist Church Sunday at 10:45. Dr. Lowe will preach on the subject "When We are Still." Music by the quartet.

Congregational Church services will be resumed Sunday with public worship at 10:30. The theme of the sermon by Rev. Corwin H. Oids will be "When the World Begins Again." Church school will be resumed the following Sunday.

"The Captain's Command," will be the subject of the sermon at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning. Francis Havener will be the soloist. The Church School with classes for men, women, boys, girls will meet at noon. The Inspiration Hour of the Endeavorers will be at 6:30. The Peoples Evening Service lasting 63 minutes will open at 7:30 with the prelude and big sing. Mr. Havener will sing. Mr. MacDonald's subject will be: "Can a Good Man Go To Hell?" The happy prayer and praise meeting will be held Tuesday at 7:30.

"God's Sanctuary" will be the sermon topic by Rev. Charles A. Marsteller at The Littlefield Memorial Church Sunday at 10:30. Music will include a selection by the choir and a solo by Mrs. Eula Munro. A children's story will precede the sermon. The Church School meets at 11:45 and the Christian Endeavor at 6 o'clock. Praise service and sermon at 7:15, the topic being "The Master's Charge to the Christian." The music will include a selection "Matter" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon that will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sept. 18. The Golden Text is: "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand for ever." (Isaiah 40:8). The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "As for God, his way is perfect; the word of the Lord is tried; he is a buckler to all them that trust in him. For who is God? God is my strength and power; and he maketh my way perfect." (II Samuel 22:31-33).

The Salvation Army is observing Rally Day Sunday in the Junior Departments. Plans have been made to present an interesting program in the Sunday School at 10 o'clock, and also in the Young People's Legion meeting at 6 o'clock. A large number of invitations have been sent out to the children of the city and it is expected that the meetings will be well attended. It is in an effort to reach these children that such special efforts are being made. Miss Dorothy Simmons will be in charge of the program. Other meetings of the Salvation Army will be: 11 a. m., Holiness meeting; 7:30 p. m., open air service at Main and School streets; 8 p. m. Sunday night evangelistic service conducted by Capt. N. P. ## CAN OPEN YOUR SAFE DEPOSIT BOX

The bank does not have a key that will open your safe deposit box. It merely has a "guard-key" for your protection which must be inserted in the lock before your key will open the box.

Therefore, if a finder of your lost key should perform the double miracle of avoiding identification and of gaining entrance to the vault, he would still be defeated. He would find his key useless without the guard-key—and no attendant would use his guard-key for a person not properly identified as the renter of that box. ## RIGHT OUT OF THE AIR

By EARLE FERRIS

Alice Reinheart, above, plays "Chichi" in "Life Can Be Beautiful" over the NBC-Red network daily except Saturday. A child piano prodigy at 12, she was on the stage before she entered radio. She was chosen for the role she now plays after the producers had auditioned 300 actresses.

Every third or fourth week, Bob Burns can't remember the tune of a number he has selected for his Thursday night Music Hall bazooska solo. That, however, doesn't stop him. A violinist from John Scott Trotter's orchestra stands beside Burns to remind him.

Like many veteran writers, Prof. John T. Frederick, who conducts the CBS "Of Men and Books" series, finds he cannot dictate copy successfully. He must sit down at a typewriter before thoughts arrange themselves into sentences.

"We, the People" guests who come to New York each week to appear on Gabriel Heatter's program Tuesday evenings, travel a total of 12,000 miles each week, or almost half the distance around the world.

A "backstage" romance is responsible for Jeanne Juvelier's marriage. The "Arnold Grinnell's Daughter" actress met her husband, Milton Kahn, transcription technician, during a theatre engagement.

Billy House's CBS Sunday night comedy series amounts to a reunion of old partners, for Billy and Robert Hatter, producer of the show, toured together several years in vaudeville.

Jack Benny, above, once a man of the road who lived for years out of over-night cases and liked it, has turned solid citizen. In starting earlier radio series in rented places in Hollywood, Jack always felt just a little temporary but now he has become a bona fide city father.

Ruth York, above, is the star of the new "Jane Arden" series, which is one of the fall additions to the schedule of preferred radio serial stories. She brings an excellent stage background to the microphone. Her program is being heard Mondays through Fridays on the NBC-Blue network.

"Will It Wash and Iron?" Asks Today's Busy Mother-Housewife

WILL it wash and iron? That's the question we ask about the clothes we buy.

We like to look smart and attractive and feel comfortable, but it is just as important that our clothes be kept fresh with a minimum of trouble. With a washer and an ironer in the home the problem is made easy and kept easy. The washer cleans everything fresh and swish in a few moments.

On the ironer, most articles can be finished the first time any new owner sits down at it. With a little practice she soon will be skillful in doing all the ironing this good new way.

Platts are pressed straight and crisp-looking by smoothing a group into position, pressing with the ironer on the "press" or stop button, moving to the next group and so on.

You use the ironer as you would the ironing board, smoothing the fabric, moving over the heated "shoe" to iron it, adjusting another section and so on. You bring the ironing surface into contact with the material simply by touching a control, with none of that picking up the iron and setting it down again that gets so tiresome. Experts estimate that the housewife lifts a total of two to five tons in the course of finishing an average ironing by handiron. Best of all, you sit down when you have an ironer.

Your own frocks, the children's little dresses, wash trousers—all lend themselves to easy finishing, which always is important. What satisfaction it is to know the laundry bag can be jammed with grubby play clothes and still not constitute any burden on the busy mother!

Fighting Game Fish Across Canada Great Sport

HOLIDAY opportunities in thousands of lakes, rivers and brooks of Canada afford fishing opportunities unexcelled anywhere in the world. The wide stretches of the Dominion's forest and lakeland abound with game fish and animals—moose, deer, grizzly, black and brown bear—where lovers of the great outdoors may find a sports district to suit every whim.

Fishing conditions are so varied in Canada and the species of game fish so numerous that a small booklet is required to list all the fish and regulations of different sections. Deep-sea fishing is found on both ocean coasts, for half-ton tuna off Nova Scotia and equally large sharks near Vancouver Island, British Columbia. 5-pound small-mouth bass at Devil's Gap Camp, Kenora, Ont., Lake of the Woods district; and in hundreds of lakes in Eastern Canada, vie for popularity with 40-pound muskies (muskies) at such favored resorts as French River Camp, French River, Ont., and fighting trout of several species—brook trout, steelheads, brown trout, rainbow and Dolly Varden trout—in various sections of Canada.

Among regions most popular with anglers are the Laurentian Mountains north of Montreal, mile-high lakes and brooks surround Banff and Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies, and Maritime Provinces on the Atlantic where mighty salmon lure fishermen to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Far-famed, particularly, are rivers of New Brunswick. These few highlights of Canada's many fishing opportunities illustrate why Canadian sportsmen are joined every year by thousands of anglers from the United States and overseas. Conditions and regulations vary so widely in different sections that anglers would do well to get full particulars in advance from A. O. Seymour, Windsor Station, Montreal or from fishing booklets obtainable at Canadian Pacific offices.

Beware Of Loan Sharks! Is Advice Of Investigators

REALIZING that many people never before forced to borrow money are now facing that unfortunate necessity, Maxine Davis, writer and investigator for Good Housekeeping Magazine, has prepared an article now appearing in the September issue of that magazine setting up danger signs for people about to borrow money.

"The small loan is never cheap," says Miss Davis. "Obviously it is not. It is the most expensive form of credit. Whatever you pay for it, the price is high. You always save money if you can pay cash."

"However, it sometimes becomes necessary to borrow money, and when it is, there are always several ways to do it. Actually, few intelligently engineered loans are ever foreclosed."

"Take the depression year of 1932. In Ohio at that time there were 129,132 small loans outstanding, but only 561 foreclosures, only 29 of which occurred while the collateral in the way of furniture, etc., was still in use. The other borrowers who lost their jobs left town and turned their possessions over to the loan company — which usually found them of small value, however! In New Jersey in 1936, with $10,500,000 outstanding, there were only four foreclosures."

Legitimate loan companies often charge as high as 40 or 50%. Loan sharks may charge as high as four thousand percent.

In general, the interest rate is not the worst danger in borrowing from the loan shark. The usual aim of illegal lenders is to get the borrower into debt — and to keep him there.

One type of loan shark operating within the law in many places today is the salary buyer, Miss Davis reveals. Here is how he works:

"Say John Smith earns $25 a week, paid on Saturday. On Thursday he's broke, and needs money badly. The salary buyer offers him $20 for his pay. He also makes John his agent to collect his own wages for the loan shark. Therefore, if John doesn't bring the $25 on Saturday, John is embroiled."

"Until 1916 no reputable credit companies made small loans, because the states had usury laws which prohibited them from lending at more than 6 or 8 percent and sometimes as much as 10 percent. The Russell Sage Foundafilter over the camera lens to give tone to the sky. Rich-toned sky is especially pleasing in pictures of white houses, and it improves the effect of any picture.

A good fourth rule—use a color

If you have no recent pictures of your home, take a few today, following these suggestions. Perhaps your house is so situated that you can't apply all the rules, but each, by itself, will help you produce pictures that more attractively present the place where you live.

GUARDIANS OF OUR COAST

What our lightkeepers and coast guardsmen are doing to protect coastwise shipping by day and by night. The day's news from many lonely outposts along Maine's waterfront.

A MAINE STORM

[For The Courier-Gazette]
If ever you have been in Maine And witnessed a furious storm, You'll remember how it sounded at night—

How the beach looked on the morn. As I sat in my chair by the fireplace I heard upon the beach Furious waves upon the rocks And a wind that seemed to screech.

Finally I tired of sitting there. Or perhaps I was lulled by the storm; But nevertheless I fell asleep Till the glorious hours of morn.

The sun had threaded its way through the clouds And was smiling brightly at me. I hardly remembered the storm of late But for driftwood washed by the sea.

The sea was calm and peaceful now. As always after the storm; Yet whenever you've witnessed a tempest in Maine You're bound to remember it long. Virginia P. Bowley

Saddleback Ledge

This has been a poor summer for line fishing in this vicinity. We have not been able to catch our winter's supply yet.

The tender, Hibiscus, recently landed cement, lathes, lead, wool, plaster, etc., with which to make repairs.

Mrs. Wells after 10 days' stay here, returned home well filled with Saddleback lobster, halibut, had-dock, corned pollock and cat fish.

I went on leave Aug. 3 and returned Aug. 28—overtime owing to illness in the family. Mrs. Wells, Manford Davidson, Alvert Scoville and Imogene Barker met in Rockland where we shopped for a time and later called on Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rogers on Maverick street. Mrs. Rogers' mother is very ill.

At Lincolnville Beach we had lobster galore and then proceeded to Lubec. While in that town, I raked 29 1/2 bushels of blueberries and did I have pies.

I made two trips to Calais, one to Bangor, and in St. Stephen, N. B., talked with Keepers Marston and Ashby of Lubec Channel and Larabee of Quoddy Head. I also visited the Quoddy Head Coast Guard Station where they are building a new boat house and slip and installing up-to-date hoisting gear.

In company with four others I went Sunday to one of the New Deal reservations in Edmunds where we cooked our dinner in an out-of-doors fireplace. At this picnic area there are seven fireplaces and seven cabins built of logs, with the side next to the fireplace, open. There are rest rooms, springs, two care takers and everything in convenient New Deal style.

We were invited to Dixie to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert O'Brien and certainly enjoyed a feast of green peas. By the way, a peck of peas is just my size.

Among the new sights is the "WPA bridge building in "Crow-town" which when completed will be an excellent achievement.

On return to the Light, I was accompanied as far as Rockland by William Davidson of New York city. Mrs. Wells, Mrs. A. Scoville, Jack Doran and Imogene Barker.

In Vinal Haven, Mr. Alley, first assistant keeper, met me with the station boat and presently I was home on the Ledge where I found Clyde Pool of Pequot and with him were Mrs. Charles Poole, Mrs. Chester Brown of Vinal Haven and Miss Edith Davis of Lynn, Mass. They had rowed here from Vinal Haven—a distance of six miles in two hours, forty minutes, making better time than last year when no allowance was made for a strong ebb tide.

Mr. Alley went Aug. 31 to his home on Beals Island. Mrs. Alley and son Clayton Alley were overnight visitors here recently.

While B. E. Stewart was coming to the Light recently from Duck Harbor where he had been clamming, his right arm became paralyzed when about a mile from the station, I noticed that he was flying a distress signal which he took in when he knew I was watching him. I went to his rescue and Sunday recalled Mr. Alley to duty. Mr. Stewart went Monday to the Marine Hospital in Portland.

Shipping is slowing up in this section although there are yet several yachts about.

The tourist season has nearly ended. We have had 181 visitors so far this summer.

Happy anchorages, seamen friends.

Baking Apple Pies

Maine's Champion Will Enter Contest At the Worcester Festival

Maine housewives are preparing to prove to skeptical husbands that they can bake apple pies "like mother used to make."

The reason for the feverish activity on the apple pie front, the Maine Development Commission said, is an apple pie contest to be held at the State House, Tuesday, Sept. 20, at three o'clock during which Maine's champion pie baker will be picked.

The winner of Tuesday's contest, Commission officials said, will be given a free trip by the New England Apple Festival committee to Worcester, Mass., Oct. 10, there to compete with other state winners for prizes of $200, $100 and $50 and to be crowned queen of New England's pie makers.

Judges selected by the Commission to ponder the merits of the State's pie makers are Miss Mary Hill, Home Economics Instructor, Cony High School, Augusta; Mrs. Horton Flynn, Augusta; Mrs. Arthur Beckett, East Winthrop. All three are recognized experts in the difficult art of making Maine's favorite dessert.

Competitors in this vicinity are asked to bring their pies to the Commission offices Tuesday. Others may ship their entries in.

Professional cooks and those under 18 are not eligible to compete. Men, however, provided they are amateurs, and have the necessary courage, may compete with the women entrants.

RAZORVILLE

Mrs. Abbie Cramer and Edith Overlock attended church Sunday in Jefferson.

Mr. Loomis who has been in Maine for a few days, returned Sunday to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Maud Howard went Friday to Rockland with Mr. and Mrs. Odell Bowes.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cummins are visiting at the home of Vivian Cummins.

Edith Overlock was hostess Sunday to friends from Augusta.

Mrs. Hattie Wentworth passed Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Ripley.

Friends of the Howard Jermyns are occupying their cottage at Head-of-the-Lake.

First Farrar Reunion

The home of Mrs. Carrie (Farrar) Clark was the scene of a joyful gathering Sunday when the Farrar family met in reunion for the first time. Silas Bowler of Palermo was chosen moderator and these officers were elected: Silas Bowler, president; Charles W. Clark of Hyde Park, Mass., secretary; Jennie Humes of Stickney Corner, treasurer; Edwina F. Thurston of Portland, historian; Edna Brann, Mary Humes, Elton Clark, entertainment committee. The officers are direct descendants of Worcester and Elmira (Clark) Farrar.

A bountiful picnic dinner was enjoyed after which the business meeting was held. Pictures were taken and much social chat indulged. A register with the names of those present revealed that "Aunt Carrie" was the oldest; and Rhoda Brann, six weeks, the youngest. Guests were present from Hyde Park, Mass., Readfield, Augusta, South Palermo, Portland and Washington.

It was voted to meet in this community next August.

With the preview this week of "Boystown," a brand new idea in motion pictures has been discovered. Here is a picture so unusual and with such a very clean story that those persons who have always advocated "motion pictures can be educational as well as entertaining" will have plenty to base their arguments upon. "Boystown" is one of the grandest bits of entertainment of the year and educational as well. "Boystown" has and will start similar movements based on the original Boystown founded by Father Flanagan in Nebraska, who says "There are no bad boys." Even Hollywood is planning a similar institution. Every city could do well to start a movement for the financing and erection of these grand projects.

Sigrid Gurie, that star of "Marco Polo" and "Algiers" recently found herself a "girl without a country" when she applied for a passport. She was signed to go to London to take the lead in Alexander Korda's production of "Burmese Boy" The United States Immigration service officials have advised her that they cannot give her a passport because she is not an American citizen. At the time of her birth in Brooklyn, her Norwegian parents were vacationing in America. Now Goldwyn has asked his writers to prepare a story for her called "A Woman Without a Country."

In addition to the "Jones Family" and "Judge Hardy" family series, two new family pictures have started. The "Higgins Family" with Gleasons in starring roles and the "Hedley Family" starring Ralph Morgan.

Alice Faye is being groomed a dramatic actress and will not sing in her next two pictures. The first is "The Girl From Brooklyn." A very poor move on her part—she may regret it.

Columbia Studio's ace stylist, Robert Kalloch asks me to tell every woman to be careful of the new hair styles on the top of the head with those tiny hats. "The new tiny hats so much in vogue, and the upswamp hair styles present a grave problem to every woman who attempts to emulate them, particularly if she does not make a complete change in some of her habits such as the way she holds her head," Kalloch warned.

Most unusual studio call during the week was made by Warners when word was sent out for 125 sixteen-year-old girls, who look their age, to appear in "Password to Larkspur Lane," first of the Nancy Drew series. Requirements are natural hair and no make up.

Jon Hall of "Hurricane" fame goes to London to play the lead in "The Thief of Bagdad" . . . With Eddie Cantor's 20th Century-Fox contract on the waste paper basket, Jack Haley, Adolph Menjou, and Arleen Whalen will make his picture "The Average Man" . . . Dorothy Lamour will be co-starred with Jack Benny in "Man About Town" . . . If plans are ironed out, Rochelle Hudson will do the title role in the film series of the famous comic strip "Blondie."

Fred MacMurray was born in Kankakee, Illinois, on Aug. 30 . . . He is 39 years old . . . Quit college after one year to learn to play the saxophone . . . Came to Hollywood and joined California Collegians orchestra . . . Made screen test for Paramount in April, 1934 . . . He is 6 feet, 3 inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, has dark brown hair and brown eyes.

REALM OF MUSIC

by Gladys St. Clair Heistad

Remembering both the talent and charm of the late Walter Smith, famous bandmaster and cornetist, I was interested in a letter appearing recently in the Boston Post from a North Carolina man summing up in Nantasket. In part it read:

"Although a Southerner, I have enjoyed the cool breezes of the Massachusetts coast for several seasons. Always a lover of fine bands I have given this section the preference, on account of being able to hear the great musical organizations of Boston. However, this summer at Nantasket, I have been thoroughly disgusted with the poor music provided at this resort, where in the past, some of the greatest bands of the country have played."

"With hopes all but dissipated, I took another chance, and listened to the concert of Aug. 27 and 28; upon inquiry I learned that they were being played by none other than the original radio band of the late Walter Smith. Although a spirit of sadness prevailed, the band was ably led by his son, who also played some of his father's famous trumpet solos. Another bit of pathos was evident when the two sons of the late bandmaster played a duet."

"The members of the Smith band look as though they had just left the symphony, the opera, and the theatre, as indeed they did. I am told each player is a man of reputation, a teacher, soloist, or leader. They certainly did not look as if they just washed up in some factory, coming to the beach for a weekend. I noticed also a proper distribution of instruments—not an excess of some, and a scarcity of others, in order to give someone a job."

"In my estimation this band has rejuvenated the musical reputation of Boston. In North Carolina we have better bands than many which have appeared at Nantasket this summer."

Apropos of all that has appeared in this column from time to time about the Swanee River, now we learn that in natural amphitheatre on the wooded banks of this beautiful, unharmed river in North Florida, a memorial is to be erected to Stephen Collins Foster, the composer whose song "Old Folks at Home" made famous the river he never saw.

The proposal is to build the memorial at White Springs, a picturesque little town some 60 miles due west at Jacksonville and within 20 miles of Live Oak, one of the State's oldest North Florida communities. While no definite limit has yet been set for the cost of the project, the estimate runs as high as $500,000. Up in the White Springs section tourists are at once impressed with the beauty of the stream. The Swanee's banks are fringed with verdure especially picturesque to the Northern eyes. Here one finds massive, spreading moss-bearded oaks and tapering cypress trees, ghostly gray in winter months and brilliant green in summer rains mingling with the tall, graceful, palmetto palms, which seem forever tossing their plume-like fronds in the winds.

Stephen Foster, so it is told, first wrote "Pedece Ribber," in his song then changed to "Swanee" because the name was more harmonious. The Florida Federation of Music Clubs, the sponsor of the memorial, believes that it has chosen well for the site of the commemorative structure for the man who wrote: "Way down upon the Swanee Ribber, Far, far away . . ."

A hundred acre site has already been donated at White Springs, selected among other reasons because of its location on U. S. Highway No. 41, one of the principal entries to the State.

MacMillan the latter part of August published a new edition of John A. Lomax's famous "Cowboy Songs and Other Frontier Ballads," revised and enlarged with the help of his son Alan. This includes many new songs and tunes that have come to light since 1910. The popular "Home on the Range" lay undiscovered in "Cowboy Songs" for more than 20 years. This is the radio favorite that cheered the lonely six months' vigil of Admiral Byrd near the South Pole, and it is said to be on the preferred list of President Roosevelt who heard the song for the first time the night of his election when a group of newspaper reporters sang it on his doorstep.

There is a farm girl who makes money producing rabbits on her farm near Wurtsboro, New York. She raises all the feed for them—mostly alfalfa, celery and carrots—and sells the fur of her White Angoras at $4.50 a pound. Who is the girl—none other than Helen Jepson, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, one of the world's great sopranos.

A complete edition of the works of Pier Luigi Palestrina will soon be published in Rome. The editor is Raffaele Casimiri. The new publication will take advantage of the latest research, and will exclude all the works hitherto falsely attributed to Palestrina. The edition will be in 34 volumes and will be published in chronological order. In order to render the music easier for modern use the G and F clefs will be used throughout the edition instead of the clefs used in Palestrina's day.

Carleton Smith, radio commentator for Lewishol Stadium concerts, tells some delightful off-stage yarns about many of the people in the world's news. He tells this of Mary Garden:

"After a matinee when Mary Garden had given an incomparable performance of Debussy's 'Mellande,' I turned on the radio in her suite. Amos 'n Andy were then in the first flush of their fame, and they fascinated her."

"You know," she said, "what I'd rather be than Mellande? Madame Queen!"

"Another famous lady of the opera was Schumann-Heink, the best showman I have ever known. I went with her to her first audition for a radio series. The client was dubious. 'Stille Nacht' was familiar, even if it was the Fourth of July instead of Christmas. And 'The Rosary.' But he couldn't make up his mind. Then Schumann-Heink took matters in her own hands."

"And I am so glad," she read from the prepared script, "to sing for you tonight, and for all the little babies, and to be on the program for the great makers of —'s baby food. Gott bless 'em!"

"Those last words, not in the script, but straight from the heart of the tired old lady, carried the hour. The client signed."

Mr. Smith says that one of the most modest and surely the most retiring of all opera singers is Kirsten Flagstad. She has no press agent, seldom sees interviewers. She never accepts invitations to dine out, nor is she feted in public. Though she travels without maid or secretary, she successfully eludes all visitors, often slipping out of the theatre or concert hall before the audience is half out."

ARTHUR T. BLISS

Funeral services for Arthur Tripp Bliss, master printer and yachtsman, who died Sunday, was held Tuesday afternoon at his home in Winthrop Center, Mass. Burial was in Winthrop cemetery. The Rev. Ralph Harper, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church of Winthrop, officiated.

Mr. Bliss was one of the oldest printers in Boston, retiring after 60 active years in 1936 with the firm of A. T. Bliss & Co., which he founded. Born in New Bedford, he was 79 years old when he died suddenly at Sebasco Estates in Maine while on vacation.

He leaves his widow, Grace Sherman Bliss, formerly of Rockland, and several nieces and nephews. A former wife, Christina Ross, died in 1904.

After the Boston fire, his concern opened a new plant at 60 Pearl street, Boston. He was affiliated with various printing organizations. He was active in yachting circles and for 22 years was secretary of the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts, which he helped organize. The association was the first organization to arrange non-conflicting racing dates. Charles Francis Adams, former secretary of the navy, was president of this organization. At one time, in company with Sir Thomas Lipton, British yachtsman he went to a Great Lakes regatta to judge races.

He was one of the organizers and first commodore and life member of the Cottage Park Yacht Club of Winthrop and vice-commodore of the Winthrop Yacht Club. He was a member of the Boston Yacht Club for 37 years. He was a life member of the Winthrop lodge of Masons and affiliated with the Phillips Brooks young men's class at Trinity Church.

PERSONALITIES IN MUSIC

JOHN TASKER HOWARD, A.S.C.A.P.

A Musical Nationalist

By Daniel I. McNamara

JOHN TASKER HOWARD, A.S.C.A.P., interpreter of current trends in American musical culture, occupies an outstanding position among contemporary men of music. Author, composer, pianist, lecturer, radio speaker, he constantly reveals a spirited nationalism born of pride in the achievements of native American musicians.

His zeal for historical accuracy has made him a storm-center of numerous controversies. It was his personal effort that finally settled the dispute over the birthplace of Stephen Foster, and indicated the restored musical shrine at Pittsburgh as the building that really cradled the great American composer. Similarly he dispelled the myth of Foster's having written "My Old Kentucky Home" in Bardonia, Kentucky.

His encyclopedic work, "Our American Music," and his biographies of Stephen Foster and of Ethelbert Nevin are permanent contributions to the library of American standard literature. His musical compositions include orchestral and choral music, organ and piano pieces, songs, the music for Percy Mackaye's folk-musical, "Wakefield," and many arrangements of early American songs used in his radio broadcasts and lectures.

Born November 30, 1890, in Brooklyn, New York, grand nephew of a namesake who founded Plymouth Church of Henry Ward Beecher fame, Howard first studied music with his mother. He left Williams College after three and one-half years, before he completed work for his Bachelor's degree. In 1917 the College conferred on him an honorary degree of Master of Arts. Brief experience in commerce convinced Howard that music was his life work. He occupied editorial posts with musical publications, then began lecturing and radio work, and the writing of books and biographical pamphlets.

His "Our American Music" is a standard reference work in schools and colleges. His library in his Glen Ridge, New Jersey, home is rich with rare historical documents bearing on the development of music in America.

Howard's enthusiasm for modern music is stimulated by his associations in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, of which he has been a member for many years. More than one thousand creators of music are included in this organization, founded in 1914 by Victor Herbert to protect the performing rights of its members' musical works.

Howard's writing and radio broadcasts are prepared with meticulous care. "Hard writing makes easy reading" is his motto. He has found that for each minute on the air, he spends an hour in preparation.

Howard has five enthusiasms—he lists his family first (the personality teaches his daughter piano); then come contract bridge, golf, cross word puzzles and his cocker spaniel, "Tucky," an abbreviation of "My Old Kentucky Home." But the driving force of his life is his nationalism, his work for recognition of American composers.

At Camp Smith

Some of the Interesting Things That Ezra Savage Saw There

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

Today, a fair Sunday, after a fine chicken dinner with ice cream and cake, we went by truck through Stowe, over Routes 100 and 108 to Mt. Mansfield and Smugglers' Notch. We saw there some of the strangest freaks of nature. Sheer cliffs rise over a thousand feet from the road on either side, one side being partially ascendable by a great deal of hard work. There were many young people here enjoying the wonderful sights God had placed at their disposal. Up here the atmospheric coloring is a fascinating green tint, rather than the normal blue, perhaps because the air is so clear and cool.

We drank freely from a large spring, 99 percent pure and delightfully cold the year round. I climbed three quarters of the way up one cliff, viewing the beautiful landscape for miles around. There are fine farms in abundance, with buxom lads and lassies who have grown to love these old hills and valleys the same as their ancestors. I saw cars from 20 states but none from "Vacationland." We saw the Hunter and his dog; visited Bingham Falls, with a mile stretch of tumbling crystal water, always of an icy temperature.

The butternut trees are full and the writer hopes to secure some as soon as frost comes. Crops are doing fine here. Mr. Editor, if you've never been up this way, you should plan to take a trip to this part of New England.

Ezra I. Savage
Extract from "Sixth District Gazette," published at Camp Smith.
Oh boy, oh boy, oh boy! But-tonholed Thos. H. (Scotty) Chadwick, company baker, in the mess hall and among other things gleaned the fact that the berries for the luscious homemade blackberry pie Tuesday were provided by none other than our esteemed Ezra Savage and William Robillard. Well, gentlemen, the treats are on us. And my pie, Scotty.

THE SAUNTERER

A. B. Crocker

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

My summer saunterings remind me of a dialogue between a summer visitor in Maine and an elderly native:

S. V. "Pardon me, but what do you do in the summer time?"

E. N. "Me? Why, I sit and read and smoke."

S. V. "But you cannot do all three all of the time."

E. N. "I callate you're right. I sit and smoke."

S. V. "But you can't smoke all the time."

E. N. "I callate you're right. I just sit."

I gave up smoking 20 years ago, so during the heated spell I just sit and read. I have traveled by land and sea in many lands, have eaten three meals at my own table and slept in my own bed at night, "set" in my cabin on the eastern side of the house in the day time and have passed a very comfortable summer.

I have just enjoyed a trip to the Canadian Rockies—a jump of 2264 miles from Montreal to our first stop. (Ten trips to New York from Boston, or ten round trips between Boston and Portland.) The thermometer hovered around 100 degrees at sea level, but up in the Rockies it registered zero.

One did not have to go to the Canadian Rockies to get a temperature, as one young man died on Mt. Washington, N. H., from exposure in August. Anyway, August was a wonderful month. In New Hampshire to Sept. 1 there were 13 days of sunshine in succession and on 12 of them the summit of Mt. Washington could be seen.

Farewell Enchantress

(By Charles Emery)

All her life she'd had her own way. Oh, of course now and again people had tried to interfere, but they'd never got very far. When she'd been a little girl all she'd had to do was stamp her foot and tear at her hair and to quiet her everyone gave in. To quiet her, everyone said: "All right, Beryl, darling," or "Yes, yes, Beryl, dear," or "Just this once I'll give in to you . . . Mind, just this once . . ."

When a girl in high school she'd always told her teachers and classmates where to get off. And then she'd stroll away with that maddening air of indifference to whatever their replies might be. The replies, if any, usually ran to the effect that "Sooner or later you'll get yours, Beryl Carlson," or "Your time will come!" or "Sometime, someone or something is going to get the best of you, Beryl Carlson, and I only hope I'm going to be there to see it!"

Merely ignoring them or wrinkling up her nose or puckering her lips at them usually served as an adequate reply to such hopeful expressions. It was as good as saying, "Ho, ho. That's what you think! No one will get the best of Beryl Carlson, she's too clever!" Only it was much more effective for it implied that she hadn't the time to bother speaking with them.

"I'm afraid for you, Beryl," her mother would often say, a nervous light in her eyes.

"You needn't be,"—this reply, always—"You needn't be. I can take care of myself. I know what I want and I'm going after it."

The things she had wanted were various. When a little girl it had been a small gold bracelet and a dress with puffed sleeves, when a high school student, it had been a pretty evening dress to wear to the various socials and later on, a tan colored roadster all her own with gold initials printed upon the doors to emphasize the fact.

Now a young woman of 23 she couldn't think of much else she did want or could use. She had about decided she had everything there was to have . . .

Until she met Michael Wilder . . . The first time she saw him was at Hampton Beach in New Hampshire. He was sprawled face down on the warm, glistening sands and before ever she glimpsed his features she knew they were molded to perfection. What she could see of the back of his dark head and the length of his big shoulders as he lay there his already bronzed back exposed to the sun, told her this. And she hadn't been wrong.

She carried with her a flimsy newspaper which she let the light sea breeze snatch from her grasp. The sea breeze picked it up and swept it toward him, burying his head in its spread sheets. He lifted his face to brush it away and when she saw how much better looking his face was than even she had imagined, she drew in her breath sharply.

She was going to make the utmost of her moment. "I'm sorry it got away from me . . . I mean, that it had to disturb you like that. Newspapers are such elusive things, aren't they?"

She knew his kind. She would stumble for words and look as innocent as a batch of broom straw—just as though she hadn't planned that the paper should do what it had done. He'd take it all in if he were at all like the other men she had known—and men didn't differ—much . . .

He said, grinning pleasantly: "That's quite all right. No harm done."

"But it must have awakened you," she persisted.

"No. I wasn't dozing. I was merely relaxing."

"Oh."

There was a pause inviting confusion, after which he said: "The water's chic."

"I should hope," said Beryl, "it is better than it was yesterday." It gave a dramatic little shudder at the memory of yesterday's temperature of the sea. Then she looked at him as though she fully believed him capable of controlling not only the temperature of the water but the coming and going of the tides and the moon that influenced them—and it was all over but the shouting.

"Shall we go in together?" he asked.

As they ran toward the water's edge, the band at the back of the beach was playing "You Came To My Rescue" and Beryl thought: "Everytime I hear that piece from now on I shall connect it with this happening." There were hundreds of current popular tunes she had connected with hundreds of similar events but she never became melancholy about them. She remembered them lightly because a new affair was always going on at the time . . .

The piece also gave her an idea. "You Came To My Rescue" suggested things—things that might cause a handsome stranger you'd just met to take an increasing interest in you.

The breakers out there were pretty large and even if they didn't actually sweep you off your feet and cast you beneath the surface, you could pretend they did so that an exciting man you had inveigled into going in with you would feel strong and mighty . . .

They had progressed about three hundred yards out, swimming closely side by side, when Beryl said, hoarsely: "I feel a sort of pain in my side . . . I think perhaps we'd better turn back—that is if you don't mind."

"Want me to carry you in?" offered the young man, quickly.

"No—I'm—all right—" You acted brave about some terrible thing that was happening to you and it made them admire you beyond belief—"No, really—it's going to be all right—it just—hurts—hurts—a little . . ."

It was while he was turning about to face the shoreline that she pinched her nose and ducked under. He saw her just as she popped up and heard her gasp for breath.

He said, "Great Scott, be sensible about this thing! Let me give you a hand. Here, grab my shoulder. No, not there, higher up. That's it. Now you just lie still and I'll take you in until you can walk it."

"Really, it's—going—to—be all right!" panted Beryl. And she was thinking, "He has the broadest, strongest shoulders of any man I have ever known. I can't let our meeting come to a finish when he gets me in shore."

She decided on a faint. At least he'd have to stay with her long enough to bring her to and it might make him linger a little longer if he were the sympathetic kind which he seemed to be . . .

"I—I think I'm going to faint," she said, and closed her eyes softly and grew limp in his hold . . . On shore curious onlookers craned their necks and gathered about the young man in blue trunks who was trying to bring to the pretty blonde in the yellow swim suit mostly consisting of straps and fasteners. The band in the grand stand was still playing "You Came To My Rescue" and inside Beryl was laughing merrily. Men were such silly things. Oh, to find one that didn't fall for the first trick you played on him! Was there such an animal, she wondered.

He spanked her cheeks, squeezed her hips in artificial respiration and muttered indistinct phrases. "Can't understand it—won't . . . seem to come to . . ."

When, out of the corner of her eye, she saw a life guard approaching, she decided it was time she came to, so she opened her eyes with a flutter and looking about her slowly, her glance finally resting on the new acquaintance, said slowly: "Did something happen to me? Did I fall asleep?" Then suddenly: "Why, I'm wet . . . My hair . . ."

The life guard said: "Something happen here?"

Beryl smiled up at him: "Nothing at all," she said and the life guard moved on down the beach. Beryl looked at the young stranger with the dark hair and broad shoulders. She wriggled a bit self-consciously upon finding his dark eyes looking straight into her own. It was as though he were probing for some answer to a question he was asking himself about her.

After a moment of enduring his stare, she said, rather rudely: "Well?"

One corner of his lips twisted, cynically. "I was just thinking," he said, not unpleasantly, "that this the first time I've ever heard of anybody fainting in the water. Perhaps you were merely—playacting?"

Beryl smiled a little nervously. "Perhaps," she said.

"So he did see through it after all," she thought. "I'll have to grant he's smarter than most of them, but I'm going to fool him yet and the next time I'm going to have him believing me. We'll see who's cleverest . . ."

"What reason, if I'm not too curious," he asked, "could you possibly have for doing a thing of this sort?"

Beryl collected her poise and said with a smile: "Perhaps I just wanted to see what you'd do in such a case. I think you kept your head very well, Mr. . . . Mr. . . ."

"You may call me Michael."

"I think you kept your head very well, Michael."

"Flatter him," she thought. "That will keep him interested in you. You're attracted to this man for the moment and you've got to hold him by some means. You've never failed yet. When any break-up comes it's always on your part. No man has ever got the best of you yet. You know what you want, Beryl Carlson and you just go after it . . ."

"Thank you—and now if you'll make known what your mother calls you?"

"Oh, she's called me all sorts of things. My name is Beryl Carlson, but she has a good many names for me."

"Did she ever try calling you Beryl?"

They wiled away a good part of the afternoon upon the sands and after a few hours or so became quite restless. Michael suggested a game of tennis and Beryl agreed that she thought the suggestion a good one. Michael was very pleased with the game she played, although she didn't beat him. Because she lost the game, Beryl was more determined than ever to prove to herself that this man was just as dumb as all the others. She had no intentions of letting a chance like that get away from her. "I'll show him up yet," she kept thinking. "It may take awhile, but I'll do it."

They had supper together at an old inn on some lonesome road out side of Hampton and returned late in the evening for the dance at the beach. Before it was half over, Beryl said: "I feel like taking a swim, late as it is. The beach is crowded tonight. How about you and I taking another dip?"

They were running down toward the water's edge again. Michael ran out into the breakers and dove while Beryl lingered at the edge of the water, wanting to go, yet for some unexplainable reason holding back. When Michael returned to her, he splashed water upon her and called her a "scared cat" and refused to swim with her because she had made him swim alone.

"I'll wait here for you while you get you dip," he offered.

Beryl said, "All right," and ran out into the darkness and into the oncoming tide. She dove through the breakers, one after another, until she was swimming over her head and then continued straight out. Soon now she'd call out to him that she was drowning—that she had a pain in her side. Watch him come running! Watch—

Suddenly, through the center of her back, she felt a sharp pain grasping her. She tried to turn back but on turning half way it spread to her right side, rapidly chasing through her right leg which now she could hardly move. She beat the water with her fists and kicked her left leg hard but she grew tired and the pain grew sharper.

"Michael! Michael! Michael!" she called out into the darkness. "Michael!"

A sudden fear gripped her. Here she was in the midst of this deep, dark water, the angry breakers seeming to become more huge with each incoming wave. How could he see her from where he was? Even her bathing cap was dark—the color of the night. And what of the trick she had played on him and planned to play on him again? Would he believe her this time? . . . The pain grew more intolerable with every motion she strove to surmount the breakers.

"Michael! Michael! Michael!"

Then suddenly even the lights back of the beach, those bright lights that lined the boulevard, seemed to have extinguished themselves and the pain was growing less and less noticeable and the water surprisingly warm though she still could feel its dark depth around her. And then she became suddenly very listless and tired and her hands stopped beating at the waves and lay at her sides in surrender to the strength of the sea.

She felt herself going under but made no last effort to stay at surface, her strength having been sapped up by the thunderous clash of the breakers upon her. Down, down, down she went. It was as though she floated down a spiral staircase, winding around and around where all was darkness, emptiness. Just before the last breaker broke above her, with its resounding fury, she could hear voices all around her.

Voices. Voices she had never liked the sound of. Warning voices, they were . . . And fingers. Fingers, everywhere, were pointing at her. And faces now—faces she knew and had always detested . . . Voices, fingers, faces, words . . . words . . .

"Sometime, someone or something is going to get the best of you, Beryl Carlson! . . . Your time will come! . . . You'll get yours, Beryl Carlson, and I only hope I'm going to be there to see it! . . ."

Voices, fingers, faces, words—all a medley, a confusion, then a faint darkness and—the invisible . . .
